I. SUMMARY

A Carson representative has resigned from the South Bay Workforce Investment Board (WIB) private sector business seat. A member of the Economic Development Commission has volunteered to fill the unexpired term.

II. RECOMMENDATION

APPROVE the appointment of Kourosh Hangafarin to the South Bay Workforce Investment Board for the unexpired term ending June 30, 2015.

III. ALTERNATIVES

1. APPOINT another private industry representative for this seat.
2. TAKE another action the City Council deems appropriate.

IV. BACKGROUND

On July 1, 2007, the City of Carson became part of the South Bay WIB. The governing body is composed of business, labor and community members representing each city. Carson has seven business representatives. The other six seats are held by Alan Caldwell, Jeffrey Jennison, Dobard, Michelle Olson, Brian Raber, and Tod Sword.

Cameron Smith from Yusen Logistics has served on the board the last two years. His work responsibilities make it difficult for him to continue on the board, so he has resigned. Economic Development Commissioner Kourosh Hangafarin has volunteered to fill the remainder of Mr. Smith's term, which expires in 2015.
